FOREWORD

For the first time in many years, a class is graduating after spending four years of high school entirely in this building. We feel justly proud to record the activities of really true South-Siders in our annual. The Senior Optimist Staff sincerely hopes that you will find in our year book many pleasures and reminiscences.

ROMANCE IN THE INDUSTRIAL AGE

By David Sanger

As our blunt nosed, rusty old tramp steamer came noisily up the bay, the fat man next to me gave a sorrowful sigh and mourned aloud, "Look at those oil tanks, those ugly wires and that awful smoke; yes, the age of beauty and art is gone." Then as we approached the new bridge, with its gigantic spider web of shining steel wire, the man sighed once more and shuffled off to the cabin to listen to his radio.

I stayed on deck to watch the moon and the stars make themselves visible once more to the people of the earth and began to muse on the opinion of my fellow traveler. Is the age of beauty dead? Have we in our desire for speed and luxury left out that which appeals to the heart and finer senses of man? Is it deplorable that the white winged majestic ships of yesterday are no more and their modern brothers are ugly metallic beasts? Is the fact to be mourned that the shores I am passing are no longer green with nature's beauties but are lined with smoke-belching factories? Should one be sad that poles holding many interlacing wires blot out the sky? I thought longer and tried to find something in favor of modern times, some idea that would justify our progress. The fat man was below, listening to a concert from the other side of the world as he munched a ripe banana. The traveler of many years ago in his beautiful ship, beautiful from a distance, would be reading an old book, one that he had probably read before as books were hard to make and expensive to buy. His fare would be dried foods, such as could be kept for a month's voyage across the Atlantic without refrigeration. He would not be bothered by the view of ungainly oil tanks on the shore; nor would he be able to travel quickly and cleanly in a train burning that oil. Tall factories would not blot out the landscape; nor would they manufacture countless small articles for his comfort. No bridges or wires above would shut from him the sky; instead a small boat would take a messenger, maybe on a life or death errand, slowly to his destination. The fat man could easily go to places where man's hand has not disturbed the works of nature, but the ancient traveler could not have all the comforts and opportunities to enjoy the culture of the world which is so lightly held by the other.

Our steel prowed, low funneled ocean greyhounds are things of beauty. Our cars no longer have distastefully sharp edges but are built with flowing stream lines. The new factories that are being built have large sun-inviting windows and are sometimes guarded by rows of trees. The newer communities have the workers' homes and recreation centers apart from their workshops. Flowery Victorian and unnatural modernistic art has given way to the simpler and more effective.

If we don't let our machines surround us and shut out our view, if we can keep their noise, filth and ugliness at a minimum and not let them become a part of our being, we can make the Industrial Age one of greater culture and beauty than any before and still gain that extra comfort we are sacrificing so much for now.

BEAUTY

Autumn was not made for study,
Was not made to pale the ruddy
Cheeks that Summer's sunlight painted;
Or to dim the eyes acquainted
With the rainbow June provides them:
Till the Winter let books moulder.
Watch the leafy tints grow older!
All the world seems slowly aging,
Summer, now, its last stand staging.
Where in books is there such beauty!

Mortimer Gross.

THE POET

Life plays many melodies
On keys of various hue,
Some tunes drab and colorless,
Others red and blue.
Music that life plays for me
Like a light or a deep mystery,
Are words in sweet symphony,
Awakened with poetry.

Joseph Mucharsky.

MOOD

Waves lapping against a wall
Rhythmically, gently
Like a caress murmured softly
Again and again.
Waves thundering against a wall
Rhythmically, monotonously
Like a tom-tom beating time
To some grotesque dance.
Waves playing against a wall
Rhythmically, merrily,
Like a girl once kissed
Running away laughingly.

Morton Batlan.

ONE SENIOR'S WORRIES

By L. Melvin Grubin

Oh! It was good to be alive! So thought Tom Bryant as whistling, he galloped up the narrow and damp alley. Not mindful of the few fences and hedges to be hopped, this was a short cut to his home and Tom certainly wanted to get there quickly. For one thing, he was hungry; second and the most important reason was that most likely IT had come. For days, for weeks, for months, he had been awaiting this hour; fearing to ask questions and not wanting to make any arrangements before he knew.

Ever since he could remember, he had been patiently listening to the recurrent babble of his older brothers, home from college, but only recently had he taken any interest. They told of their experiences at the proms, dances, and social functions that were part of their regular high school and campus life. They had had the good fortune to have this time come before the depression when all the clothes and money to do these things could be obtained. Sometimes, these "men of the world" would tell of their ventures into New York night life after one of those affairs, at two, three, and even four o'clock in the morning. The descriptions of the beautiful clothes, the Cadillacs and Rolls Royces, the super-service at this place and the singing waiters at that, the various liquors they had imbibed, the "hot" dance band here, the soft dreamy orchestra there, and the fabulous sums that were spent, sounded like entrancing music to the ears of the "baby of the family," as he was often called. He would sit there with mouth agape, absorbing it all like a dry sponge plunged into water. Alone in his room, he dreamt of the proms and dinner-dances he would attend where he himself would be one of these sophisticates (he had already practiced good table manners at home to the amazement of his parents). He would imagine himself at a table in a fashionable night club later on ordering a "gin fizz" or a "scotch and soda"; not that he would drink it. To him this was grandeur; the sumptuous food, the formal clothes, the dazzling entertainment, and he would be part of it.

These were the thoughts of this ordinary boy as he returned dirty and unkempt from playing football with the neighborhood gang. He was graduating this term and would not have much time to play in the future. For a moment he meditated on the graduation night when he and his fellow graduates would enter the silent assembly with hesitating step and ascend finally to the stage where they would receive their diplomas and from which they would descend to start their careers in life. Just as quickly as these serious thoughts had appeared, they faded and his mind turned again to the present and the impending social affair.

The Senior Prom is the most important social event in the life of the high school student. Whom one is going to take and what will happen are discussed a long time before the day. Tom had gone to numerous parties but this was to be his first big function and as he scaled the last hedge he realized the awful fact that IT might not have arrived. But reassuring himself, he planned when he would talk seriously to father about taking the car and what he would say; then he suddenly quickened his pace. The thought came to him that he must find out immediately, if he wished to date up Carol before the other fellows had a chance. He entered the house whistling with that nonchalant air but no sooner had he passed out of his mother's sight then he dashed upstairs to his room and flung open the closet door. There it was! The glamorous formal evening clothes hung there serenely and calmly but seemed to him to be surrounded by a halo of light. His first evening suit.

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

A flower! A drop of bleeding red
A poppy growing o'er the dead
A cross, bare wood, yet purest gold,
A soldier's grave—The story's old.
Listen! A cry, a torturing screech
A man, a living man—no more!
A piece of flying, whining lead has
Pierced a heart. A man before
Is now a groaning, shapeless mass
Of spirit crushed, silenced for aye
A mass of bones; life out of reach.
The end of a soldier—Bleak decay.
A flower—a drop of bleeding red
A poppy growing over the dead
A cross, bare wood, yet purest gold,
A soldier's grave—The story's told!

Rosalind Barnett.

CONTINUITY

The moth
Enraged
Beats against the lamp
His wings forming
Countless tiny fans—
He falls at last
A pinch of gray ashes—
The lamp burns on.

Milton Fried.

UTOPIA

By William Kussmaul Jr.

People for ages have sought in vain for a Utopia, a complete happiness and life. Philosophers have tried to reason out this mystery; men have given their own precious lives in seeking the perfect living.

Some years ago, a book was written by H. G. Wells. This book, "The Time Machine," concerned the relation of time to life. Perhaps you have read it; if not, I am sure it would prove valuable as well as interesting. Mr. Wells, though the book was fascinating, did not connect time to life in the manner that I believe it could be done.

We are able to conceive of three dimensions: length, height, and width; but there has been much ado about a fourth dimension. This much discussed, debated, and disguised fact can be brought to light. The fourth dimension is time. As we travel down a road in length, or go up in an elevator in height, or across a field in width, so might we travel down this highway of time. But that is where the difficulty arises. A first dimension creature could go along on only a straight line; an animal of two dimensions could not leave a circle drawn on this paper; likewise, a third dimension creature (you and I) can not leave a room which has no openings. A being of the fourth dimension could leave our cell at will.

If we could look down the road of time, we might avoid our hard knocks and have that coveted complete happiness. Man is weak, very weak; he can imagine the future but does little or nothing about it.

But if man could cross the barriers of time, he would be able to continue in what ever form of happiness he desired. This would be Utopia to us, but to our newly constructed man with a fourth dimensional brain, the Utopia of our present conception would be everyday life. He could not know what true joy was. After all, isn't happiness experienced in those wonderful moments after ones not quite so pleasant? If we could avoid the ruts in our lives by the fourth dimension, we would sacrifice our happiness. And to destroy happiness is to destroy life itself, for life in the emotional sense is happiness and sorrow combined.

Our new man would not have joys and sorrows but would be complicated by other complex emotions.

Thank goodness we are men, and that man is weak!

PHILOSOPHY

As the ink from our pen,
So flow our thoughts and feelings
When we begin to write,
However sluggish before.

Harold Dorfman.

DESOLATION

By Lester Gersbenfeld

A blistering sun beats down upon the trackless waste of burning sand. High over head wheels a pair of vultures, one sometimes alighting to seize some desert mammal in its powerful beak, rising again to join its mate. Frequently they seem to hang motionless in the air. Not a sign of water, nor a vestige of foliage. Only cacti, rearing its spiny columns here and there, present a grotesque figure. A sultry wind rolls over the dunes, carrying with it sand,— sand to deposit again at the foot of a nearby cactus.

As night draws near, the setting sun throws long shadows across the darkening desolation. Then, suddenly as the switching off of a light, the sun is gone, and deep darkness ingulfs the desert.

The moon rises, and the cactus presents a more striking silhouette. The night air becomes cool, then colder, until the cold is so intense that any vegetation which might exist on this lonely desert during the day, must struggle for its subsistence in the icy air of the night.

WAR

Sam Klugman.

War, the destroyer of mankind, the maker of nations, the curse of God, the folly of the ages! Since the beginning of time, man has been at war with himself, at first only with crude weapons but now with poisonous gases and destructive bombs,—implements which in a few seconds can kill thousands of people, innocent and defenseless people. Awakened by the roar of bombs, they are blown into oblivion, trapped like mice in a trap with little or no chance to flee.

At first, man fought to preserve his home and his family; now he fights because some dictator desires to impress his people, murdering tens of thousands of human beings to retain his high command, spending hundreds of millions of dollars in times of so-called depression to slaughter peaceful homelovers.

The soldier goes to war full of high hopes, hopes of immortal fame and decoration. Instead, he gets a cold unidentified grave or a living death lacking arms or legs. Little does it harm the dictator, yet it hurts the poor mother, who has nursed her child from an infant to a man after many hard fearful years, only to see him swept away, blown into dust in an instant. "What fools these mortals be."

GOD AND TWO MEN

By Milton Klein

Often did I complain of my sorry lot and lament because of my sad plight. Was I not in the same good grace of God as my brethren? Yet fame and fortune had not been unkind to them but had left me untouched by its enlightening assistance. Embittered by these thoughts, I sought the confines of the house of God, where I might voice my sentiments and plead for my just foothold among the seats of my brethren. With eager anticipation I made my way to the site of my confessions and there proceeded to bewail my ill fortune. I resented the fact that I did have but one pair of sandals to cover my weary soles and did direct most of my appeals along that channel. It was there that I noticed the presence of a poor hungry beggar whom fortune had left shorn of legs, offering reverent words of thanks to his protector for allowing him the opportunity to partake of life among his fellow men. Then did I bow my head in shame and know the reason for my sorry lot.

GRADUATION PARALLEL

Soon the buds
Will burst their last confining walls
To blossom forth
Into an eagerly waiting world.
I can see
A parallel.
Our spring of schooling almost done
We, too, shall blossom forth
Into a world:
But will it be
As eagerly waiting?

Lena Licht.

LIFE

Life is a light-hearted mother
Whispering of strange places.
Time is a strict father
Forbidding me to see them.

CONFIDENCE WITH CAUTION

We are leaving a world of our own which has been centered around our high school years. Many problems have been encountered and through the assistance of our faculty, we have coped with them successfully. Upon entering the world of today, we will observe that it will not give us the tolerance and leniency that we've been accustomed to. By using careful judgment and discretion we should be able to make our way accordingly.

The student should appreciate the fact that the instant he leaves high school, he can hardly expect to be a "world beater." Far be it from that! The idea that is trying to be conveyed is that conditions have improved to such an extent that the high school graduate of today has a much better chance of getting a position than the graduate of yesterday.

There are two types of students who are, I'm afraid, going to meet with heavy disappointment. One is the timid, bashful individual who upon being asked whether or not he can fulfill certain requirements will hesitatingly venture, "I think so" although he knows that he is capable of performing these requirements perfectly. You can hardly expect to sell your services to others if you give the impression of doubting yourself.

On the other hand, the noisy fellow who has over-confidence and over-assurance written all over him will find that he is as handicapped as the backward boy. There is nothing so annoying to an employer as the "smart-aleck" type who is positive of knowing it all. A week of telling others how to mind their respective businesses will find this type of person without a position nor references for a future one.

Both of these cases are of course extremes, and we must strike a happy medium. A clean-cut graduate, who can inquire about a position in a quiet and businesslike manner and yet manage to convey the confidence which he feels within himself, without offering the attitude of being "cocky," is the likely candidate for whatever position he chooses.

People have become successful while others have been miserable failures. The graduate of today should be able to profit by these experiences of others.

Irving Lubin.

———SSHHS———

He had the proof,— the picture, there;
And as he gazed a steady stare
He saw that it was he.
And as hard as he might try,
He could find no other guy
Who he would rather be.
From this likeness he could see
A pile of personality.
So now he felt quite satisfied
But how his touched-up photo lied!

AND NOW GOODBYE

All farewells are essentially the same. They are summaries of all the gay and happy events that have passed in review down the stretch of years. We have risen from the insignificance of a freshman to the comparative importance of a senior.

We have stored in our hearts memories that will never be forgotten. Memories of exciting football games, the routine of classes and assemblies, the shuffle of hurrying feet through the corridors, the weary flights of steps, the breathless scampering to homeroom, and the nervous distribution of report cards.

And now, to all this, we seniors must say good-bye. To the walls, to the teachers, to friends, to everything, good-bye. With sorrow-laden hearts, we leave our Alma Mater to take our places in the world. We thank you, South Side, for everything, for love and hope, and despair, and above all for pleasant memories. May our tomorrows be as bright as our yesterdays, and may our yesterdays live forever as tomorrows.

Elsie Nastrom.

——SSHHS——

REMINISCENCE

Jack Kay

The scene is a crowded classroom in the first week of a new term with the pupils in a few cases sitting two in a seat. The laughter is jerky, nervous, and spasmodic although the teacher has just told one of his jokes that is really good. The reason for this situation is one of the freaks of nature, for these students have all been fortunate to be assigned to a teacher who has in a few minutes completely won their friendship and confidence. But the "Grim Reaper," alias one of the Schedule Committee, is expected momentarily.

Outbursts of anguish and pain are heard through the rooms as someone calls out the names of the teachers that correspond to the rooms and periods mentioned. Some pupils, giving up all hope of salvation, raise their hands as it is inevitable that they will be chosen, for they have a free period at that time. Others are stricken dumb when they realize that they have only a minor subject one of the designated periods which can easily be changed. Cringing, they attempt to cling to their fast sinking ships. The long, drawn out process of looking at everyone's card is then begun with the fatalities, complaints, and groans many.

Students and teachers, including the Schedule Committee after they have swept through the ranks changing this one and that one, are puzzled over this condition: Why should the pupils fear to be changed to another teacher? Shakespeare said, "The fear of the unknown makes us rather bear those ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of."

BOYS

Once more Father Time snatches some of our best athletes from among the numerous sports in which they participated.

Among those departing are the boys who captured the City Swimming Championship for the third consecutive year. They include Irving Lubin, breaststroke star, and Sidney Sirkin, backstroke; Joel Estrin, cousin of another of South Side's former tanksters, who showed us how to swim the relay and also how to dive with the greatest of ease; and Mort Michaels, the fellow who led the way in the 220. Morton Singer and Bill Birmingham also represented South Side.

Coach Thornton will lose Leon Seigel, Julius Cohen, Thomas Swangin, Nathan Flaxman, Francis James, and Barney Epstein, together with Edward Lembrick, manager of the football team in 1935; and Bernard Pomerantz, who played guard that year.

The Basketball team will remain almost completely intact with only Warren Kay missing from the line-up. Buddy, who held a forward position, has shown true South Side sportsmanship throughout his athletic career. He also turned in an excellent record in baseball last year.

Our Table Tennis team has to bear the loss of Seymour Cohn, captain of the boys who maneuver that little white ball across the net with victorious results. Barney Epstein was also captain of the reorganized Tennis team.

Charles Banks, Ray Coraggio, Steve Kovac, Steve Wasko, Michael Krawacki, and Phil Reisman of famous South Side's Gym team will also depart.

The Track team will be without the services of Ernest Smith, Sam Tabolsky, Julius Cohen, Paul Barr, Milton Klein, also Messrs. Seigel, James, Lembrick, Seymour Cohn, Raymond Powell, and Morton Batlan will be missed by our Fencing team.

All these boys have performed splendidly during their stay in South Side. They have led the way, and we sincerely believe that future generations will look up to them with the same pride and glory that we feel today.

Athletes: South Side salutes you!

GIRLS

From the large number of girls who have participated in athletics, it is evident that the boys are not the only ones who have found real enjoyment in them. Even though girls do not receive a large block "S" as a reward for activity in a sport, they derive as much pleasure as those boys who make the first team.

There is a place for every type of girl athlete. For the more robust, we have hockey, swimming, basketball, and horseback riding, while the less active take part in ping-pong, volley ball, archery and dancing.

Often, even on a bitter cold day, hockey enthusiasts could be seen enjoying an exciting game in preparation for the North Jersey Field Hockey Association Tournament. The most capable players were chosen to represent South Side in it. They were: Ruth Kreps, Frieda Lembrick, Rosalind Barnett, Bessie Wex, Jane Zink, and Florence Jones. From this group, Ruth Kreps was awarded a position on the North Jersey Hockey Team, which is the highest award a player may obtain. Frieda Lembrick was placed on the honorary team.

Basketball, a few years ago, held a high place in the interest of the following girls: Harriet Gluck, Grace Eisen, Frieda Lembrick, Ruth Kreps, Alla Kamins, Harriet Papier, Florence Jones, Sylvia Dubowy, Jane Zink and Caroline Sudfeld.

A group of mermaids calling themselves the South Side swimming squad under the leadership of our own gym teachers has made much progress in that line of athletics. Jessie Anderson, Theresa Pabst, Grace Eisen, Rose Volick, Wanda Shaw, Caroline Sudfeld, Helen Systo, Betty Asen, Jane Zink, and Florence Jones are among those who have held a position on the squad.

Along with Spring comes Archery. It may not seem a strenuous sport to you but it requires a great deal of skill. There are many girls who will never forget the many pleasant times spent at Archery practice. Among South Side's fair Dianas are Rosalind Barnett, June Fude, Wanda Shaw, Bernadette Allgayer, Sylvia Dubowy, Grace Eisen, Helen Horn, Ruth Kreps, Catherine Casson, Caroline Sudfeld and Eleanor Spicer.

While hockey balls or arrows are flying through the air, other girls are smacking ping-pong balls about the table tennis room. Hermine Hersh, one of the most enthusiastic players, recently gained recognition as the champion. Edith Rettig held that same position last year.

Along with other school activities, sports have contributed to making our stay at South Side unforgettable and pleasant.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

The officers of the Senior Class of June, 1937, are: Bernadette Allgayer, our Secretary, at the left, with Jane Zink, our Vice President beside her. Seymour Lehrhoff, our Treasurer, is seated in the center. The President, Murray Simon, is at his left.

We are very proud of their administration and thank them for their services.

HONOR SOCIETY

The principal aims and objectives of the Honor Society are to create an enthusiasm for scholarship; to stimulate a desire for service; to promote worthy leadership; and to encourage the development of character. A candidate must rank within the first third of his class, show initiative in his academic work, be of service to his home, school, and community, have a tendency to lead others and be reliable and trustworthy. This is one of the highest attainments possible at South Side and is a goal every student strives to reach. Only Senior members are shown here. They are: President, Melvin Grubin; Secretary, Harriet Gluck; Edgar Robinson, Edith Rettig, Murray Simon, Bernadette Allgayer, Catherine Casson, Sam Klugman, Blanche Tepper, William Kussmaul, Theodore Feldberg, Viola Flanagan, Jack Kay, Warren Weintraub, Louis Spindler, Richard Snyder, Anne Petlock, Edith Orenstein, Toby Naroditsky, William Layer, Allan Kalnitsky, Lois Epstein, Edith Cooper, Betty Asen, Milton Fried, Mortimer Gross, Ben Rothfeld, Edward Sand, Henry Schneider, and Constance Vasselle.

SENIOR DEBATING TEAM

The debating team of South Side has long been an organization of high standing, and boasts of a highly successful season. The Senior Class is well represented on the team and offers as its contribution, Murray Simon, Milton Klein, Edgar Robinson, and Hilda Gennet. As in the past, the team has been performing admirably under the able guidance of Mr. Byron Kirk.

THE SENATE

The Senate is an organization which has charge of all school activities. The officers are: President, Bernard Goldstein; Vice President, Jack Rubin; Secretary, Eleanor M. Spicer. Mr. Jayson is the faculty adviser.

SAFETY SQUAD

The South Side Safety Squad, although only four years old has become one of the most dependable organizations in the school.

The Squad is in complete charge during all fire drills, and members are stationed throughout the building during assembly programs, entertainments and dances.

The main purpose of the Squad is to promote greater safety in the school.

In order to join, every member must pass a rigid test on safety and first aid.

The present officers of the club are: Charles T. Halligan, chief; Kenneth Hahneman, deputy chief; Leonard S. Morvay, Jr., deputy chief; Sherman Borkan, secretary.

SERVICE CLUB

The Service Club was organized for the purpose of helping the offices, laboratories, bookroom, and the faculty advisors. The members of this organization must be dependable and must be good students. At the beginning of the term, students with the desire to be of service apply for membership in the club. After careful consideration the list of selected people is posted. Assignments are quickly filled and the South Side Service Club, under the supervision of Miss Tyson, the faculty adviser, begins another term of service to the school.

LIBRARY STAFF

Second Row—Bessie Lakos, Josephine Zuckenberg, Alice Abbott, Edith Cooper, Helen Haug, Miriam Fox, Phoebe Fern, Virginia Casson, Dorothea Reu, Nan Woodside.

SCIENCE CLUB

The Science Club, this term, has almost 100 members and is the largest club in the school. The officers are: President, Abe Krasnoff; Vice President, Lester Gershenfeld; Secretary, Elizabeth Donnenberg. Mr. Kanengeiser, of the Science Department, is the faculty adviser. The meetings have been most interesting up to this time and the club is looking forward to many more. At the meetings, interesting lectures and demonstrations are given, both by members of the club and various outsiders, on many phases of science. The club is also anticipating trips to nearby places of scientific interest.

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB

The Business Girls' Club is a newly formed organization at South Side. It was organized under the guidance of Miss Carrie E. Rivoli.

The purposes are: (1) Development of personality for business and society. (2) Promotion of general culture and civic improvement. (3) The development of social intercourse. Above all, the club proposes to develop the spirit of cooperation, the desire for individual improvement, and the ability to get along with people.

The diversified program includes: trips to business organizations in the city, plays on business activities, interviews with business executives, debates on topics of interest to the business girl, reviews of books on vocations, and lectures and discussions on the necessary training, qualities, and personality traits needed for success in business.

The officers elected for this term are: President, Doris Reichenbecker; Vice President, Zella Busch; Secretary, Tillie Chernetsky.

PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

Photography is a very absorbing subject and the Photography Club is a popular one. The keen interest evinced during one of the contests is ample proof of that. It is needless to say that the club has developed many interesting studies.

The picture above is comprised of both the Senior and Junior Photography group. The officers of the Senior division are: President, Morton Batlan; Secretary, Martin Lipstein; Treasurer, Frank Rozensky.

The Junior division is headed by Joel Stern, President; Rita Rozensky, Vice President; and Ida Feldman, Secretary.

Mr. C. Normal Finkel and Mr. Eugene Trubnick are the faculty advisers.

SCRIBBLER'S CLUB

This club was organized under the advisership of Miss Elizabeth L. Neal for the encouragement of creative writing. For the publication of these articles, the club produces "The Epistula."

The members are: President, Robert Meyers; Vice President, Laura Lucks; Secretary, Lillian Maidanick; Michael Aissen, Norman Belo, Selma Botvenick, Norma Edisis, Henry Geuse, Melvin Grubin, Anne Gudis, Nathan Feld, Ann Fisch, Anita Hahn, Clara Hasset, Edythe Katzen, Harry Ladne, Harry Merliss, Estelle Nulman, Lena Niznick, Jenny Rosenberg, Lucille Samsky, Carol Segal, Abe Slatnick, Shirley Sporn, and Estelle Tabankin.

* * * * *

The Junior Scribbler's Club, whose aim it is to encourage creative writing, has fourteen active members. Mr. Glicksberg is the adviser of this club; which has its own little periodical, "The Rising Sun." The editorial staff consists of Thelma Estrin, Dorothea Herman, Betty Berlin, and Virginia Lintner. The officers of the club are: President, Virginia Lintner; Vice President, Esther Weingold; Secretary, Jeanette Wilken.

MUSIC CLUB

The Music Club is a newly formed organization at South Side. Its main objective is to assist pupils to understand and appreciate good music. The officers are: President, Milton Klein; Vice President, George Plutchok; Secretary, Anne Perlman. The club is under the capable supervision of Mr. Phillip Gordon and Miss Murphy.

DRAMATIC CLUB

Under the supervision of Mr. Joyce, the South Side Dramatic Club has again staged a successful production entitled "When the Clock Strikes," headed by such able performers as Milton Klein, Arlene Borden, Sidney Furie, Anne Petlock, Jack Rubin, Elizabeth Donnenberg, Marvin Goldman, and Jack Kaufman. The remainder of the organization assisted in all technical and dramatic assistance. The officers are: President, Anne Petlock; Vice President, Hilda Gennet; Secretary, Grace Eisen.

JUNIOR SECRETARIES CLUB

The Junior Secretaries Club came into existence with the introduction of the commercial courses in South Side High School. The members, just as the name implies, are the secretaries of the future. The club has attained its present size and efficiency through the training and guidance of its faculty adviser, Miss Lillian Doroson. The officers are as follows: President, Ruth Schwartzbach; Vice President, Virginia Morris; Secretary, Ruthe Warhaftig.

The club was organized for the purpose of giving our commercial students a chance to come in closer contact and familiarize themselves with the procedure and etiquette of the business world. To achieve this aim, lectures, debates, plays, and investigations of business concerns are planned.

SPEED CLUB

Although the Speed Club has only been organized since the beginning of this term, it is an exceedingly active club.

The purpose of this club is to promote more speed and accuracy among our expert machine operators and to encourage good fellowship and sociability among the members. Competition is held twice a week, on Tuesdays and Fridays at 7:55 in the morning. At the end of each term, an award is given to the champion of each machine. At intervals during the term special meetings are held in the afternoon for the purpose of having socials.

This group works under a very definite system of operation. Mr. Kahn is faculty adviser and the present officers are: President, Catherine M. Casson; Vice President, William J. Winters; Secretary, Bernadette E. Allgayer.

THE SENIOR PROM

Daylight gathered her bright sunny robes about her, and shrouded in its dazzling rays, folded her tent and like the Arab silently stole away. Misty shadows like ever-lengthening fingers seeped downward, gradually thickening into the black shades of night; and so with her coming, happiness and joy soared high in the breasts of hundreds of dignified Seniors throughout the city, who for an endless eternity had awaited this eventful night of nights.

Hop upon my magic carpet and gliding through the clouds, we'll peep into the exclusive confines of their homes. Are you ready? Wheee—we're off!

A vision of loveliness gracefully pirouettes in front of the long mirror. Enraptured at her newly discovered beauty, she reverently touches her shimmering satin gown, her silver slippers, the dainty tiara set upon her shining locks to see if they are real. She pinches herself to see if this is all a dream—much to the delight of Mother and Dad who tenderly gaze upon their offspring, love radiating from their faces. Tears well up in their eyes and an aching lump chokes their throats; can this radiant vision of young womanhood be their little girl, the baby they had held in their arms only yesterday?

Come, let's not linger any longer, we'll leave this trio with their joys and sorrows and once more comfortably settled on our magic carpet, we'll go visiting.

An irate young man, dejectedly slumped in a chair, surveys his bedroom with bitter gloom and hate. A scathing volley of profanity bursts forth to break the ominous silence of the room. The walls and bed shake with fear at this volcanic eruption. Like a tiger he springs from his chair, savagely knocking down defenseless articles of furniture unfortunate enough to be in his path, and like a demon whirlwind scrambles under the bed making a last desperate search. Then to the bureau, viciously scattering the contents of drawers, turning the room into a cyclonic state.

"Johnny, it's 8:30. Are you almost dressed, dear?"

"Mother, I'm not going to the prom. Call up Mary and tell her."

"Not going! Darling, is anything wrong?"

He lowered his head sorrowfully, "It's no use looking, mother, I've lost the bids;" then bursting forth into a rage he shrieked, "And don't call me 'darling'."

"Why Johnny, what are these two tickets lying on the bureau? It says 'South Side High School—Senior Prom!'"

And now for our last stop on the magic carpet. Hold on—we're off again.

A breathtaking sight greets all who enter the magnificent ballroom—once the menial gym. Swaying couples dip and glide gracefully to the tantalizing rhythms of a world-famous orchestra. The refulgence of the lovely ladies, the artistic beauty of the interior decoration and the glorious countenances of the sophisticated youths—all present a dazzling spectacle of youth in its glory that is not easily forgotten.

Have you enjoyed your ride on the magic carpet? We'll take the trip again next year; shall we?

DOTS AND DASHES

Greetings, Mr. and Miss South Sider, this is your South Side correspondent, Hilda Gennet. Let's go to school—for the last time—Dots and dashes and lots of flashes from corridor to corridor and room to room—Scoop! After all our years at S. S.—Did you know that there is a shower installed over the door of the Chem. and Physics Labs? It seems that if you should be burning up (from the heat or otherwise) all you have to do is to walk to the doorway, pull the string and get a nice, cool, refreshing shower. It has been disconnected for the past four years but the Senior Class is so hot that we were afraid of spontaneous combustion and insisted that it be connected, at least during the spring. (A lot of good it did us—the Chem Lab still smells terrible—and we're still hot.) . . . Flash! . . . This may sound like a treatise on the Chem Lab but I just can't resist telling you about the chemical dinner given by several senior chemists. The guests of honor were Mr. Belcher, Mr. Jayson, Mr. Kanengeiser, Miss Kent, Mr. Trubnick, and Mr. Getman. The tables were set with filter paper doilies on cobalt glass and funnels were dressed up as placemarks in red and blue litmus. The frankfurters were held by test tube holders and toasted over bunsen burners. The beans heated in a beaker were eaten with deflagrating spoons, while the sauerkraut and mustard also in various sized beakers, were ladled out with spatulas. The crowning point of the meal came when the coffee was filtered through funnels and sipped from Florence flasks through bent glass tubing. The Lab. was decorated with red and gray rubber tubing hung from the lamp. I forgot to mention that the invitations were written with NaOH on red litmus paper. Chemistry songs were sung, and a grand time was had by all.

S - S - So. - Si. - High

This period of finishing four years of high school should be sad, but to me it is one of great joy and of wonderful reminiscence. What one of us will ever forget that first day of school when none of us knew where to go, as we were the first freshmen to enter this school? How about the classes in English with Mrs. Rhodes, whom we first met as Miss Benson and whose middle name we always teased to know; and when Mr. Wallock came into school as a substitute, how we enjoyed his class!

Then we became Sophomores, and the school revised our home rooms after vacation. It was heart breaking, but we made many new friends. From then on, the great rivalry broke out between Mr. Howe's 113 and Miss Frost's 100 in intramural sports, as well as supremacy in studies. It was about this time that commercial studies were introduced and we all made many more friends among the would-be "stenogs" and business "execs." In this same year many of us started our modern languages and how some of us fell by the wayside.

Then we grown-up Juniors really started to gain prominence in outside activities. We will all remember the phenomenal success of Murray Simon and his well-deserved rise to an office in the G. O. Jane Zink as well came to the front in our government when both were 3A's. We will also remember those many affairs of our present Senior Class Vice President. There were quite a number and it was always a source of mystery as to the one to whom she would turn next. After such names as Helfrecht, B. Meyers, D. Powell, J. Gould, B. Egan, T. Smith, and even little Willie himself, we often wondered when the boys would run out. Then we had the selection of the Honor Society. Miss Schenck had retired, the preceding summer and Miss White took over the Honor Society advisership. It was in this term that we met Miss Kent who was such a great help in Physics.

At the beginning of the Senior 4B term, we really came to the fore. All three G. O. candidates for President and the three for Vice President were all 4B's with Murray again winning and that grand person Connie Vasselle as his Vice President. Most of us will remember the 4A's that made our life miserable in the Chem. Lab. with hydrogen sulphide. It was during this term that we missed Mr. Howe for a short time and then we again had him as our faculty adviser.

In our last term, as do all Senior A's, we took full possession of the school. In that last and most glorious term of all, we thought that we were the last word in youth and as usual, that last word was "good-bye." In taking possession of the school, we took over nearly all of the presidencies. In getting supremacy, Bernie Goldstein realized his ambition to be president of the G. O. with Eleanor Spicer as his secretary.

We also saw the Black and Gold courtsters nearly take the championship of the state. In this year, almost all of us met Mr. "K." None who knows him will ever forget him even if we do forget the "K'mistry." Another person we could never forget is Mr. Kirk. Of all the "swellegant" persons that we have met, he takes the cake for an all-round good fellow.

On the whole, we have had a fine time through our four years. We were lucky to have had such wonderful homeroom teachers and such a man as Mr. Belcher to help us through our trials and troubles. He also helped many towards the next goal—college.

We have been the "first" in many respects. We were the first students to enter South Side High School as freshmen in many long years; the first to start at ten o'clock and still get out at two-thirty; we then just missed going on the afternoon schedule. We got out of the early years of the Health classes. And last but not least we were one of the few classes to be dominated and presided over by the boys. At that, we've had many fine intelligent girls.

When we have left, there will be many things that we will not soon forget. Among them are: Jerome Schaeffer's cornet, Marie Trautvetter and Virginia Morris (as close together as two ticks of a clock), Buddy Kay's basketball, Gerrie Lanson and so-o-o-o many fellas, Lehrhoff's camera, Joel Estrin's swimming, "Salesman Sam" Rozensky, Ivory-teaser Irv Lubin, and our artist, Spindler.

In closing this last set of "whispers," may I take this opportunity to thank the class as a whole. When I came to Newark four years ago, I didn't know anyone in the city let alone the school and all of you have certainly made it four mighty happy years.

Thanks,

Whispering Willie.

EIGHT O'CLOCK ON MONDAY MORNING

My gosh, I wish I'd stayed in bed!
My throat is dry and oh, my head!
My body aches, my poor feet groan,
My voice is like the weirdest moan.
I've got six classes, no work done,
I'd like some coffee and a bun.
Boy oh boy, do I feel bad;
But what a glorious time I had!

WORLD SERIES

The game opened with Glue at the stick and Small Pox catching. Cigar was in the box and Strawberry played short. Corn was in the field. Egg was umpire but was put out because he was rotten. Cigar let Board walk. Song made a hit and Sawdust filled the bases. Soap cleaned up and Cigar went out while Balloon pitched but went up in the air. Cherry tried it but was wild. Ice went in and kept cool until he was hit by the ball, then you ought to have heard Ice Cream. Lightning finished the game and struck out six men. Lunatic was put out because he was off his base. Bread loafed on third and Light was put out on first. Cabbage was manager because he had a good head. Knife was called out for cutting first base. Grass covered lots of ground and the crowd cheered when Spider caught a fly. Steak was put out on home plate. Clock wound up the game by striking out. If Door had pitched he would have shut them out.

SHE KNEW HER ALPHABET

"Mary Adams," said Mr. Jayson in chemistry class, "give the formula for water."

"Yes sir," said Mary, "H I J K L M N O."

"Whatever are you driving at?" exclaimed Mr. Jayson. "Do you think you're in the kindergarten?"

"No sir," replied Mary. "You said yesterday that it was H to O."

DID YOU REALLY THINK SO

I clung to him confidently. His strong muscular arm encircled my waist and held me up as we waltzed and glided about. One of my hands lay upon his broad shoulder, the other rested in his, and from time to time, he squeezed it and smiled. I smiled back at him. We knew!

We knew everybody was watching us, but we didn't care! We were young and happy! Youth never cares; does it? We danced and danced gazing into each other's eyes.

Then the bell clanged and the fight was over . . .

My teacher says that I must write,
Some poetry or verse,
And though I work with all my might,
Each attempt seems worse.
The meter seems all jumbled up,
The rhyme scheme is a mess,
And I would gladly pass this up,
But alas, my friends know less.
So I must sit and ponder thus,
And try as best I "kin,"
To find a word to rhyme with "but,"
Or get my meter in.
My work it is so primitive,
My brain so sluggish now,
That all attempts seem very poor,
It's time I stopped, and how!
